ACEC’s Political Action Committee and Fundraisers for State Candidates
Why You Should Contribute To Both

Political fundraisers advance and protect industry interests and enhance your firm’s bottom line. Participate in local fundraisers for local and state races and use the PAC for Congressional races. While local fundraisers are self-directed by donor with your name identified, ACEC national determines which candidates to support with ACEC/PAC money. In both cases, only individual contributions are accepted and the amount of contributions to candidates is limited by state/federal statutes.

It is important to contribute to both to local fundraisers and the ACEC PAC. Here’s why:

Political Fundraising in Massachusetts
- Supports local and state races
- Provides credit to the individual, the firm, and ACEC/MA, if we are involved with the event
- Demonstrates commitment to the democratic process
- Enhances the image of the consulting engineer, engineering firms and ACEC/MA
- Invests in pro-business candidates
- Positions the industry on state/local regulations and legislation
- Develops and maintains political relationships
- Tool for political involvement

ACEC’s PAC
- Supports federal (Congressional) races
- Harnesses the independent giving power of ACEC members to support the industry’s agenda in Congress
- Enhances the image of the consulting engineer, engineering firms and ACEC
- Invests in pro-business candidates
- Positions the industry on federal regulations and legislation
- Develops and maintains political relationships
- Puts ACEC and its member firms on an even footing with competing interests
- Leverages influence of the most politically connected individual members
